Joe Murray

Joe Murray was in the Royal Naval Division.

Murray left school when he was 12.

He went to work in a coal mine.

He wrote two books about Gallipoli and the first world war.

Murray describes the Third Battle of Krithia.

He fought near William Browne.

On his way back he fell in front of a Turkish trench.

He had to lie there very still until it was dark.

Then he escaped.

He was lucky to go through the battle without injury.